Malta's Property Market: Understanding the Current Climate

As we approach the end of 2026, it is worth taking stock of Malta's property market and considering the factors shaping its direction. The sector continues to demonstrate resilience, supported by sustained demand and Malta's appeal as a place to live, work and invest. However, we are also seeing changes in buyer expectations and market behaviour that are influencing property decisions.

The strong momentum experienced over recent years has not disappeared, but the market is becoming less about volume and more about value. Buyers are increasingly considering location, quality, affordability and long-term potential before making a commitment.

The latest figures published by the National Statistics Office reflect this changing climate. Residential property prices increased by 6.9% year-on-year in the second quarter of 2026, with apartment prices registering a stronger increase of 7.4%. More recent transaction figures for October show that 1,217 final deeds of sale were registered, representing a 5.6% decrease compared with the same month last year. However, promise-of-sale agreements increased by 4.1% to 1,408, while the total value of final deeds rose by 12.1%. These figures point to continued underlying activity, with a market in which transaction volumes and property values are not necessarily moving at the same pace.

One of the most noticeable developments is the change in buyer behaviour. Purchasers are becoming more conscious of value and increasingly prepared to take their time before committing. Demand remains present, particularly for correctly priced and well-presented properties, but buyers are less willing to compromise on quality.

This encourages sellers to adopt realistic expectations and places greater importance on professional valuations, effective marketing and sound advice. Properties that stand out increasingly offer good design, practical layouts, natural light, outdoor space and convenient access to amenities. Location remains fundamental, although buyers continue to explore areas beyond Malta's traditional property hotspots, as well as Gozo.

Supply is another important factor. Development activity remains significant, giving buyers a wider choice of residential projects. However, more supply does not automatically translate into better value. Developments must respond to genuine market needs, particularly in terms of affordability, design and the type of homes people want to live in. With land increasingly limited, construction quality, thoughtful planning and sustainability must remain priorities.

The international dimension also continues to support Malta's property market. Tourism recorded 3.6 million inbound visitors during the first nine months of 2026, an increase of 17% over the same period last year. This reinforces Malta's appeal as a place to live, work and invest, while sustaining opportunities across the rental market, particularly for well-positioned properties.

Both long-let and short-let accommodation play an important role in the wider property sector. However, development must be balanced, ensuring that Malta remains attractive to investors while also meeting the needs of residents, professionals and families seeking long-term accommodation.

Looking ahead, the final quarter of 2026 is likely to be characterised by greater selectivity and a stronger emphasis on fundamentals. Buyers will continue to look for value, sellers will need to price realistically, and investors will increasingly assess returns against the quality and long-term prospects of their acquisitions. Not every location or property category will perform equally, making informed guidance increasingly important.

Ultimately, Malta's property market remains underpinned by economic activity, international appeal and the enduring importance people place on owning or securing a home. At Frank Salt Real Estate, our responsibility is to understand these developments and help clients navigate them with confidence. Whether buying, selling, renting or investing, sound decisions require experience, knowledge and an understanding of what makes a property genuinely valuable. These principles will remain as important as ever.

ESS Celebrates 25 Years of Growth, Trust and Innovation

From a small business in Ħamrun to an established name in Malta's lighting and electrical industry, ESS marks a quarter of a century of growth, development and lasting relationships.

2026 marks an important milestone for Electrical Supplies and Services Ltd (ESS), as the company celebrates 25 years in Malta's lighting and electrical sector. What began in 2001 as a small store with just three employees has grown into a company of over 120 people, serving homeowners, businesses and industry professionals across the Maltese islands.

Over the past 25 years, ESS has continuously developed its services to keep pace with changing technologies, industry demands and customer expectations. As Malta's construction and design sectors have evolved, so too has the company, expanding its expertise and introducing new solutions to support projects of every scale.

Several important milestones have shaped this journey. The move from Ħamrun to larger premises in Mrieħel created opportunities for further growth, while the acquisition of Elektra in 2018 brought together valuable experience, expertise and a broader portfolio of electrical solutions, strengthening ESS' position in the local market.

The expansion of its lighting showroom and the growth of its panel-building activity have further extended the company's capabilities. Today, ESS offers a comprehensive range of products and services spanning decorative and architectural lighting, switches and sockets, electrical distribution, control systems and energy-efficient technologies.

Despite its considerable growth, ESS has remained focused on what has always mattered most: its clients. Understanding their needs, offering dependable products and providing practical support have been central to building long-standing relationships based on trust.

From helping homeowners find the right lighting for their spaces to supporting electricians, contractors and developers on larger projects, ESS continues to prioritise solutions that meet both present requirements and future expectations.

None of this progress would have been possible without the continued confidence of its clients, the dedication of its employees and the strong relationships established with suppliers throughout the years.

As ESS celebrates its silver anniversary, the milestone is an opportunity to reflect on the journey so far while looking towards the future. With technology, design and industry requirements continuing to evolve, the company remains committed to adapting, improving and delivering solutions that customers can rely on for years to come.

From Property to Home: Furnishing Made Easier with Ferraracasa

With over 50 years of experience, family-run Ferraracasa helps homeowners turn their new properties into comfortable, practical homes, offering personal guidance from the first consultation to final installation.

Buying a property is an exciting step, but furnishing it needs many decisions to be taken. From choosing the right kitchen and planning storage to finding furniture that works well together, knowing where to start is not always easy.

At Ferraracasa, the aim is to make this process simpler. Now in its third generation, the family-run business continues to help homeowners plan and furnish their spaces with confidence.

The journey begins with a personal consultation at the Ferraracasa showroom in Valley Road, Birkirkara. The team takes time to understand each customer's needs, style, budget and timeline before suggesting suitable furniture and design solutions.

Whether furnishing a new apartment, renovating a family home or preparing a rental property, the approach is always personal. Customers can plan one room or several spaces together, making it easier to choose furniture, colours and finishes that work well throughout the home.

Once the main ideas are discussed, the team prepares furniture proposals, layouts, visual renders and quotations. These help customers see how their chosen furniture could look in their property, compare different options and make decisions before placing an order.

The support does not stop there. Ferraracasa also carries out on-site measurements and guides customers through ordering, delivery and professional installation. Having the same team involved throughout the process helps keep everything organised and gives customers someone to turn to whenever they need guidance.

For those planning their homes this season, Ferraracasa has extended its Black Friday offers throughout December. This gives customers more time to explore the available options and benefit from special prices across selected furniture ranges.

Even after the offers end, Ferraracasa remains committed to competitive pricing. Customers are always welcome to discuss their quotations with the team, who will be happy to review the available options and help them find the best possible value for their budget.

For Ferraracasa, furnishing a home is not simply about choosing furniture. It is about helping people create spaces that suit their everyday lives, while making the experience as comfortable and straightforward as possible.

Visit Ferraracasa in Valley Road, Birkirkara, or book a free quotation and consultation at www.ferraracasa.com.mt to start planning your home.
